Hunting

You will be shooting mixed game on the Fasque Estate in rural Angus. This historic sporting estate offers one on the premier mixed species shoots in Scotland. You will shoot walked-up a mixed bag limit of 8-10 head of game per gun. You will be hunting mostly pheasant, grouse and partridge, but in addition you can expect to encounter woodcock, duck, pigeon, geese, rabbit, hare and snipe. There is no limit on the number of hares, rabbit or pigeon that can be shot.

Walked-up shooting requires a reasonable degree of fitness. It is the client's responsibility to ensure that he or she is sufficiently fit to undertake the required physical exercise in safety. Also, the weather can be bad during the shooting season. All hunters must wear good quality walking boots and have warm waterproof clothing of a subdued colour. Please note that it is customary for each hunter to tip the Estate's gamekeeper £20-30/day.

In accordance with Scots Law, visiting hunters are required to obtain UK Visitor Permits for the use of hired or imported shotguns in Scotland. The process requires River & Green to act as your sponsors in support of the application.

The process requires about 4-5 weeks to complete and all associated fees are included in this proposal. For those who do not possess a valid firearms or hunting license, it is required by law that they are accompanied by the owner of the hired-out rifle. All hunters must be in possession of fully comprehensive insurance. You will be asked to produce your certificates of insurance before hunting can commence.

Accommodation

Kinloch House Hotel

Kinloch House epitomizes the finest in Scottish Country House hotels. Situated on a gently sloping hillside looking out over a wide and lush valley in the heartland of Perthshire, this is an elegant retreat and perfect example of refined Scottish luxury.

Built in 1840, the house is a fine example of a Scottish country house with an oak panelled hall and first floor portrait gallery. All eighteen bedrooms including three suites and four ground floor rooms are individually decorated with fine furnishings and fabrics.

Kinloch House is situated in the heartland of some of Scotland's richest agricultural acres and the centre of the soft fruit growing industry. The House is only a few miles from the historic Perthshire town of Dunkeld, on the banks of the River Tay. The area is rich in history and offers easy access to some of the best shooting in Scotland.

Guests can enjoy a stroll to the walled garden or take tea in the conservatory or by the log fire. There are also very comfortable and elegant lounge areas and a bar stocked with a huge selection of malt whisky.

No stay would be complete at Kinloch House without the pleasure of the food. Under executive chef Steve McCallum, every attention is paid to detail from the supplier to the table. There is a consistency of performance in the kitchen and a belief in the value of freshness and quality. Full use is made of local game, beef, fish, shellfish and produce from the garden.

All of the bedrooms are very large, en-suite and tastefully decorated in period style. All have wonderful views over the Perthshire countryside. This proposal is based on the provision of one 1 suite and 2 double rooms with breakfast and 4-course dinner included.
